The eleven interconnected essays of this book penetrate the dense historical knots binding terror, power and the aesthetic sublime and bring the results to bear on the trauma of September 11 and the subsequent War on Terror.

Terror and the Sublime in Art and Critical Theory: From ...

The Sublime in essence then is a feeling of delightful awe caused by some terror, at least according to its most famous proponent, the Irish philosopher and statesman Edmund Burke. His book on the subject, A Philosophical Enquiry into the Origin of Our Ideas of the Sublime and Beautiful , published in 1757, set a precedent for further discussion - most notably by the Prussian philosopher Immanuel Kant .

What is the 'Sublime'? - Peter Sjöstedt-H

The Harvard Classics. 1909-14. Terror. N O passion so effectually robs the mind of all its powers of acting and reasoning as fear. 1 For fear being an apprehension of pain or death, it operates in a manner that resembles actual pain. Whatever therefore is terrible, with regard to sight, is sublime too, whether this cause of terror be endued with greatness of dimensions or not; for it is impossible to look on anything as trifling, or contemptible, that may be dangerous.

Terror. Burke, Edmund. 1909-14. On the Sublime and ...

Whatever is fitted in any sort to excite the ideas of pain, and danger, that is to say, whatever is in any sort terrible, or is conversant about terrible objects, or operates in a manner analogous to terror, is a source of the sublime; that is, it is productive of the strongest emotion which the mind is capable of feeling.

Edmund Burke and the Sublime - Wordsworth Grasmere

From Terror: fear "robsthe mind of all its powers of acting and reasoning"; includes fear ofpain or death; whatever produces terror visually is sublime too. From Obscurity: when weknow and can see the danger clearly, much of our fear "vanishes";"dark, confused, uncertain images" found in nature produce obscurity.
